Ilham Aliyev says Germany is increasing its influence in South Caucasus and its relations with neighboring Azerbaijan will contribute to cooperation, peace, tranquility in region.

Azerbaijani President Ilham Aliyev said on Tuesday that oil and gas supplied from his country to neighboring Armenia contribute to its energy security.

Speaking at a joint press conference with German Chancellor Friedrich Merz in Berlin, Aliyev said Germany, as a leading country in the EU, is increasing its influence in the South Caucasus and that relations between their countries will contribute not only bilaterally, but also to cooperation, peace and tranquility in the region.
