The decision on Armenia's further development vector remains with the country's citizens, said Vladislav Maslennikov, director of the European Affairs Department of Russia's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

In an interview with RIA Novosti, he expressed hope that Armenian society would be able to objectively assess the possible risks of rapprochement with the European Union.

"The final choice of the country's development vector in any case remains with the citizens of Armenia. In this connection, one would like to believe that they will be able to objectively assess the danger of that 'European integration' adventure into which they are now being drawn," Maslennikov said.
