Measures to remain in force for 2 years and liberalize 80% of Armenian exports to EU.

The European Union will introduce temporary trade preferences for Armenia from Oct.10 to support Armenian producers and exporters affected by recent trade restrictions imposed by Russia, the European Commission announced on Friday.

The measures, which will remain in force for two years, will temporarily liberalize almost 80% of Armenian exports to the EU, including nearly all exports of fresh fruit, vegetables and flowers affected by the Russian restrictions.
