The positive comments received on the first annual report published in 2015 have encouraged the Center for Eurasian Studies (AVİM) to continue with publishing an annual report for the year 2016 to present AVİM’s activities and publications in a comprehensive manner.

The year 2016 has witnessed significant developments in AVİM’s area of interest in the sphere of Eurasia, reinforcing our earlier analysis, assessments and forecasts. In the period following the end of the Cold War that ended with the victory of the West and the implosion of the Soviet Union, AVİM has been consistently voicing the view that Turkey’s geopolitical vocation has been shifting from once being the easternmost post of the West to moving to the core of Eurasia, thus becoming the nexus of the West and an East emerging as a new heavy weight in global relations.

Asian countries, with China at the forefront, have indeed continued to exert their influence in the political, military, economic scales of the global balance, corroborating that the trend of the global balance shifting from the West to the East is of a sustaining nature. The Eurasian Economic Union that was initiated by Russia, as an alternative to the European Union; One Belt One Road Silk Road Project that China perseveringly keeps high on the agenda; the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, initially introduced with the cooperation of Russia and China as a security oriented... gathering that has evolved into an organization with increasingly economic content; the Economic Cooperation Organization founded by Turkey, Iran and Pakistan, now including ten members, with an outlook for reinvigoration; the Asian Infrastructure and Investment Bank initiated by China; the emerging proposals to introduce payment in local currency into the international finance system; the crucial location and potential of the Black Sea and the Caspian basins can all be cited among the indicators of the increasing significance and acknowledgement of Eurasia in global geopolitics.

In the meantime, the definition of Eurasia keeps on being flexible. Geographically, it is possible to define it as the combination of the land masses of Europe and Asia. However, in practical terms, it appears to be convenient to define its scope in accordance with special relations and interests. It is a leitmotif of AVİM that Turkey is situated at the center of Eurasia, providing a door for the West to the East and vice versa. The hinges of this door, in AVİM’s view, are the Caucasus and the Balkans. Turkey is a Balkan country. The etymological root of the word “Balkan” is Turkish. The European identity of Turkey is closely tied to being in the Balkans. As such, the Balkans and beyond are of special interest to AVİM.

The Caucasus, the Caspian basin and Central Asian republics constitute the other focal point of interest for AVİM. Relations with Georgia and Azerbaijan have continued to prosper in 2016. The sole exception blocking regional stability and peace in South Caucasus continues to be Armenia. Therefore, the problems created by Armenia and the Armenian diaspora continue to take priority in the work and research of AVİM. In this context, the 2016 issues of two periodical journals, the 53rd, 54th and 55th editions of Ermeni Araştırmaları in Turkish, and the 33rd and 34th issues of Review of Armenian Studies in English have duly dwelt on the subject. AVİM has also started to study the Armenian question and Armenian claims in a comprehensive and in depth manner from a judicial angle, as this aspect of the question is acquiring new significance. To that end, we have organized legal workshops in cooperation with legal professionals and academics, the proceedings and outcomes of which have proven to be of great value.

We have further focused on Armenian allegations employed as a political tool of abuse against Turkey by third countries, as well as on the religious aspect which has come out more into the open.

Information in detail is available in the following pages on AVİM activities. I would particularly like to mention our Daily News Bulletin, bilingual, in Turkish and English, with an ever increasing following and qualitative improvements in content. We are convinced that, with regard to AVİM’s work, the year 2016 has been quite valuable and forward looking.

In conclusion, I wish to express, on behalf of AVİM, our gratitude to all who have shown interest in and given support to our work, as well as sincere thanks to AVİM staff to whose unrelenting efforts and conscientious work we owe the level we reached today.
AVİM was established in 2009. However, since it has assumed the duties of the Institute for Armenian Research (ERAREN) at the Eurasian Strategic Research Center (ASAM) and has carried out its work under the same president, it is possible to say that it has a history of seventeen years.

Since 2000, in parallel with Turkey’s efforts for accession process to the European Union, the Armenian question has gained significance. In this period, Turkey has been increasingly confronted with the genocide allegations. Since it has become a necessity to respond to these allegations in a scientific manner, the Institute for Armenian Research was established with this purpose. Within this framework, the Institute began publishing Ermeni Araştırmaları since 2001, and Review of Armenian Studies since 2002. These journals have been published until today without interruption. At present, Ermeni Araştırmaları has reached its 55th issue, while Review of Armenian Studies has reached its 34th issue. Thousands of pages of studies on the different aspects of the Armenian question have been published in both journals.

The reason for this intense publication activity is that no substantial studies were made on the Armenian issue in the past, except for the work of several selfless scholars. Both Ermeni Araştırmaları and Review of Armenian Studies have filled this void and enabled scholars who work on the Armenian question to publish their work. As in the past, today, our journals are the only continuous publications in Turkey on the Armenian question. On the other hand, a very large portion of the official records on the Armenian question is found in the archives of Turkey. Therefore, it is necessary that these records are studied and presented to the scientific community as soon as possible.

Following its establishment, AVİM took over the responsibilities of the Institute for Armenian Research and continued its work. Furthermore, AVİM began to take close interest in the Eurasian region which also includes Turkey. Considering the economic rise of China and India besides Japan, which has been long a major economic power, the commercial success of Southeast Asian countries, and Russia’s rich natural resources in Asia, it is understood that the America-Europe axis, which has been at the forefront in terms of global economy and therefore politics, will eventually lose its leadership position to Eurasia. The importance of the rise of Eurasia for Turkey, a country located at the southern border of Europe and whose belonging to Europe is still subject to debate, is that it provides Turkey the opportunity to become a central country, and as a result to become a transit country in terms of energy and transportation, as well as providing Turkey advantages in terms of trade. Therefore, besides Europe to which it has desired to become economically integrated, Turkey needs to take greater interest in the developments in Eurasia and develop closer relations with the countries of the region. Therefore, great responsibility falls to AVİM and similar organizations to carry out studies in this field. As a matter of fact, AVİM cooperates with leading think-tanks, particularly with those based in the Caucasus and Russia, and also plans to establish close contacts with organizations in Central Asian Turkic states.

Presently, AVİM carries out its work with a small staff of highly educated analysts with good knowledge of foreign languages. I extend my warmest gratitude to the staff of AVİM and to everyone who showed support to our organization, and express my confidence in the success of AVİM’s future studies with the experience and foresight of AVİM Director Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç, as well as the valuable contributions of Ambassador (R) Yiğit Alpogan who has recently joined AVİM.
It is my honor and privilege to have been called upon at the end of 2016 to become a part of the Center for Eurasian Studies, a think tank, the work and activities of which I have always followed with interest.

In my new duty that I assume with great responsibility, I hope and expect that the experience I gathered during my long career in the Turkish Foreign Ministry as well as my last six years of work as the Deputy Secretary General of the UfM (Union for the Mediterranean) established in 2010 in Barcelona will be of help. In the same vein, I regard it highly valuable in particular my time as the Deputy Undersecretary responsible for the entire Eurasian region in the Turkish Foreign Ministry and my later work on the Mediterranean, that is while not a part of Eurasia in the strict sense, but closely related and maintaining deep interaction in political, economic, social, and cultural spheres with it. Indeed, in my view, Eurasia should not be regarded as an isolated entity confined to a certain geography, but as a dynamic region with effect on surrounding geographies in our ever-changing and transforming world.

This particularity of the Eurasian region becomes all the more significant when one realizes that political and economic center of gravity in today’s world is quickly shifting from Euro-Atlantic towards East Asia-Pacific. During this transition, it is noteworthy that Eurasia never loses its importance and remains always at the center defining and influencing developments on the global scale. This fact by itself brings forward new responsibilities to a research and analyses institution like AVİM with focus on Eurasian affairs.

In line with these thoughts, I am happy to be able to contribute to the intellectual work of AVİM as much as I can. At the start, I would like to extend my thanks to the AVİM management for granting this opportunity to me.

In the workshop titled 1915 Events and International Law: the Juridical Effects and Outcomes of ECtHR’s Perinçek Precedent (1915 Olayları ve Uluslararası Hukuk: AİHM’ın Perinçek İçtihadının Hukuksal Etkileri ve Sonuçları) organized by AVİM in cooperation with Başkent University on 11-12 February 2016, the verdict by the Grand Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) on 15 October 2015 concerning the Perinçek v. Switzerland Case Verdict in Terms of Denial and Memory Laws*, topics including the meaning and importance of ECtHR’s precedent in terms of the discussions related to “denial laws”, whether countries (foremost being Switzerland) with “denial laws” need to make changes in their relevant laws, and whether the precedent has a preventative effect on prospective legal initiatives were discussed.

On 4 April 2016, AVİM organized a conference titled An Assessment of Armenian Claims in Light of the Verdicts of the Constitutional Council of France and the ECtHR (Fransa Anayasa Konseyi ile AİHM Kararları Işığında Ermeni İddialarının Değerlendirilmesi) with Ambassador (R) Dr. M. Şükrü Elekdağ as the keynote speaker.

On 8 January 2016, the Constitutional Council of France delivered its verdict on the case that was filed for the repeal of the Gayssot Act that outlaws the denial of the Holocaust. The plaintiff for the case argued that the act should be repealed due to the fact that, despite criminalizing the denial of the Holocaust, the act does not criminalize the “denial” of the “Armenian genocide” or other similar events legally recognized by France. Armenian activists in France and the French-Turkish “Association for Neutrality in Turkish History Education” (TTETD), which requests the removal of the Armenian genocide claims from school textbooks in France, joined the case as intervening parties. In its application, TTETD argued that the 2001 Act accusing Turkey for committing the “Armenian genocide” lacks a legal basis and therefore requested its repeal due to it being in violation of the Constitution of France. In its verdict, the Constitutional Council of France decided that the Gayssot Act does not violate the Constitution of France since it foresees the penalization of the denial of crimes that have been ascertained by an international criminal court. In this respect, the Council confirmed that only a competent court may determine whether an action constitutes genocide. Because of this, the Council’s verdict eliminated the potential effects of the 2001 law that recognizes the events of 1915 as genocide and the possibility for the adoption of acts that criminalize the rejection or the “denial” of the “Armenian genocide”.

During the AVİM conference, Ambassador (R) Dr. Şükrü Elekdağ, who is at the same time chief advisor to the TTETD, shared with the audience his thoughts on the importance of the cases dealt by the Constitutional Council of France and ECHR in terms of the Armenian claims and the Turkish-Armenian dispute.

This conference constituted the first leg of the conference series organized by AVİM on the Turkish-Armenian Relations titled Armenian Question 2016: 10 Views.

Prof. Dr. Seçil Karal pointed out that documents, articles, and correspondence of Mormon missionaries that lived in the Ottoman Empire for up to thirty years consist of remarkable observations about the Ottoman Empire in that period. One of the important points that Prof. Akgün underlined was that the Mormon documents that belong to the year 1915 and afterwards include data that invalidates Armenian claims.

This book was rendered possible thanks to the project titled Gürcistan'daki Müslüman Topluluklar: Azınlık Hakları, Kimlik, Siyaset (Muslim Communities in Georgia: Minority Rights, Identity, and Politics).

Within the context of this project, the discrimination towards the four Muslim communities in Georgia – Adjarians, Borchali Turks, Meskhetian Turks, and Kists – and its consequent outcomes were analyzed in terms of minority rights, identity and politics. In this context, Georgia’s commitments within the framework of its memberships in international organizations, treaties to which Georgia is a part of, legal arrangements as a result of these treaties and the effects of these arrangements on Muslim minorities were analyzed in comprehensive field researches conducted in Georgia, Azerbaijan, Armenia, and Turkey between September 2015 and March 2016. Interviews were conducted not only with members or leading figures of the said communities but also with officials from government agencies, politicians, NGO specialists and academics. In this manner, the status of Muslim minorities was analyzed in an objective manner by taking into consideration different opinions and assessments. We present this book, which is the product of intensive hard work and devotion, to all our readers who are interested in the subject.

Turkey and Russia have had many ups and downs throughout history ranging from hostilities and war to friendship, support and cooperation. After the collapse of the Soviet Union in a globalizing world, Turkish-Russian relations grew to become multi-faceted and multidimensional, providing a rich ground for scientific academic studies and research.

History no doubt is still a prominent field. Joint publications, symposiums and conferences on history carried out in the recent period have been concrete indicators of the developing cooperation between Turkey and Russia. Maintaining and developing this cooperation is of vital importance for the future.

As a result of contacts and meetings with the esteemed Head and academics of the Turkish Studies Programme of the Russian Academy of Sciences, Institute of Oriental Studies, the idea emerged to compile a book on the work of some distinguished Turkish and Russian historians and academics, particularly on the history of the Caucasus region. In accordance with this understanding, AVİM took the lead to edit this book.

Ermeni Araştırmaları is indexed by EBSCO and TÜBİTAK/ULAKBİM.

Ermeni Araştırmaları accepts submissions on a range of subjects that include Armenian politics, history, culture, socio-political developments in Armenia, regional and international politics of Armenia, Armenia-Turkey relations, Armenia-Iran relations, Armenia’s relations with the states in the Caucasus, Armenia-US relations, and Armenia-EU relations.

Previous issues include contributions of prominent scholars such as Justin McCarthy, Guenter Lewy, Edward Erickson, Norman Stone and Jeremy Salt.

In 2016, 53rd, 54th and 55th issues of Ermeni Araştırmaları were published.

Ermeni Araştırmaları, Issue 53

The 53rd issue of Ermeni Araştırmaları includes seven articles, a report and two book reviews. First of these is Ömer Engin Lütem’s Olaylar ve Yorumlar (Facts and Comments). In this article, Lütem evaluates the events organized to commemorate the 100th and 101st year of the relocation of the Armenians in Turkey, Armenia and other countries, as well as in some international organizations, and other developments with regard to genocide allegations.

Sinan Bilgili, in his article titled Osmanlı Tahrir Defterlerine Göre İran-Azerbaycan Şehirlerinde Ermeniler (Armenians in Iran-Azerbaijan Cities According to the Ottoman Census Books) draws a picture of the Armenian population who lived in and around the city of Revan (Yerevan) at the beginning of 16th century in accordance with the Ottoman population census documents.

Taner Aslan’s article titled Ermeni Yardımsever Hayır Cemiyeti (Ermeni Cemiyeti-i Hâyriye-i Umûmiyesi) ve Nizamnamesi (The Armenian Humanitarian Charity Society and its Regulations) analyzes the political aims of the Armenian Humanitarian Charity Society and provides the readers with the Regulations of the Society.
The article titled Ermenilerin Nahçivan İddiaları ve XX. Yüzyıl Başlarında Yapılan Katliamda Büyük Güçlerin Rolü (Armenians’ Nakhchivan Claims and the Role of Great Powers in Massacre by Armenians in the Beginning of XX. Century) by Emin Şıhaliyev examines how the Armenians claimed Nakhchivan at the beginning of the twentieth century, how Russia and Britain gave support to the Armenians and how the Muslim population was massacred by the Armenians in the region.

Ramazan Erhan Güllü’s article titled 1836 Tarihli Ermeni Kilisesi Nizamnamesi Çerçevesinde Çarlık Rusya’nın Ermeni Politikaları (Armenian Policy of Tsarist Russia in the Framework of 1836 Armenian Church Regulation) analyzes Tsarist Russia’s policies on Etchmiadzin Catholicosate in the first half of the 19th century.

Nazım Caferov and Araz Aslanlı’s article titled Karabağ Sorununda Ateşkes ve Rusya (Russia and Ceasefire in Karabakh Conflict) gives a detailed account of ceasefire attempts for the resolution of the conflict, the features of the 1994 ceasefire agreement and the role played by Russia in the signing of this agreement.

In her article titled AIHM’in Perinçek Kararı: “Soykırımın İnkârı”/ İfade Özgürlüğü İkileminin Aşılabilirliği (Perinçek Judgment of the ECHR: The Surmountability of the “Genocide Denial” / Freedom of Speech Dilemma) Deniz Akçay examines the European Court of Human Rights’ final decision on the Perinçek case. Akçay argues that the decision paves the way for the Armenian genocide claims –the reality of which has been turned into an inarguable taboo- to be researched and evaluated like any other historical event.

The 53rd issue of Ermeni Araştırmaları also includes a report titled Güney Kafkasya’daki 2-5 Nisan 2016’da Yaşanan “4 Gün Savaşı” (The 4 Day War in the South Caucasus on 2-5 April 2016) by Turgut Kerem Tuncel. Although “The 4 Day War” was the most critical development with regard to the Karabakh conflict since 1994 Bishkek Protocol, it was overlooked both by the Turkish media and the public. Based on this premise, Ermeni Araştırmaları includes this report by Turgut Kerem Tuncel which sheds light not only to the recent events but also to the essence of the Karabakh conflict.

There are six articles in the 54th issue of Ermeni Araştırmaları. First of these, as always, is Olaylar ve Yorumlar (Facts and Comments) by Ömer Engin Lütem. In this article, Lütem analyzes German parliament’s decision after a long hesitation that acknowledges Armenian genocide allegations and the following tensions in relations between Turkey and Germany, Pope Francis’ trip to Armenia, the conflict in Karabakh region on 2-5 April 2016 and consequent developments in the region.

Hayati Aktaş and Vahit Güntay’s article Türk-Ermeni İlişkilerinde Algılar ve Karar Alıcılar, Tarihin Yansımaları Üzerine bir Analiz (Perceptions and Decision Makers at Turkish-Armenian Relations, An Analysis of Reflections in History) is a detailed analysis of the psychological dimension of Turkish-Armenian relations.

In his article titled Suriye, Halep, Musul, Zor, ve Urfa Bölgelerinde Ermenilere Yönelik İskân Uygulamaları (1915-1917) (Resettlement Practices in Syria, Aleppo, Mosul, Zor and Urfa Towards Armenians (1915-1917)) Mevlüt Yüksel gives a detailed account and analysis of the Ottoman regulations and communiques with regard to the provision of allowances, accommodation and protection for the Armenian population who were resettled in Syria, Aleppo, Mosul, Zor and Urfa.

Hande Dolunay’s article Ermeni Edebiyatında Milliyetçi Eğilimler: Paruyr Sevak Örneği (Nationalist Tendencies in Armenian Literature: Paruyr Sevak Example) discusses the nationalist tendencies in the Armenian literature and their reflections in the public during the Soviet era through the Armenian writer Paruyr Sevak.

Ehtiram Aşırlı’ article titled Suriye’de Ermeni Diasporası (Armenian Diaspora in Syria) evaluates the condition of Syrian Armenians – a topic which recently became a current issue due to the civil war in Syria- with reference to Armenian, Assyrian and Arabic sources and official documents.

The last article in the 54th issue of the Ermeni Araştırmaları is Cumhuriyet Öncesi Bitlis’te Yabancı Okullar ve Misyonerlik Faaliyetleri (Foreign Schools and Missionary Activites in Bitlis in Pre-Republic Era) by M. Törehan Serdar. In this article, Serdar analyzes the anti-Ottoman activities through the missionary schools in Bitlis, which was an important city with a significant Armenian population.
Ermeni Araştırmaları, Issue 55

The final issue of Ermeni Araştırmaları in 2016 includes 5 articles and 1 book review. In his article titled İngiliz Belgeleriyle Mondros Mütarekesi ve Ermeni Sorunu (Mudros Armistice and Armenian Question in the Light of British Documents), Tolga Başak discusses Armenians’ attempts for a “Greater Armenia” during the Mudros Armistice negotiations.

İhsan Burak Birecikli’s article titled Anadolu’da Bir Amerikalı Misyoner: Frederick Davis Gren ve Ermeni Meselesi (An American Missionary in Anatolia: Frederick Davis Greene and Armenian Question) shows how American missionary Frederick Davis Greene reflected in his books the Armenian revolts in Sason during his stay in Van for 4 years.

M. Törehan Serdar’s article Belgelerde Bitlis ve Çevresindeki Ermeni İsyanlarında Fransa’nın Rolü (The Role of France in the Armenian Revolts in and Around Bitlis) discusses how France supported terrorist acts by the Dashnak-Hoybun organization between 1924 and 1930 in Eastern Anatolia.

One of the most important articles in the 55th issue of Ermeni Araştırmaları is Ömer Engin Lütem’s review of Taner Akçam’s recent book titled Naim Efendi’s Diary and Talat Paşa Telegrams: Krikor Gergerian Arşivi (Naim Efendi’s Diary and Talat Pasha Telegrams: Krikor Gergerian Archives). In his review titled Aram Andonyan, Naim Efendi ve Talat Paşa Telegramlar Üzerine Bir Değerlendirme (An Analysis on Aram Andonian, Naim Efendi and the Talat Pasha Telegrams), Ömer Engin Lütem shows how Taner Akçam’s criticisms on Şinasi Orel and Şevket Yuca’s book written in 1983, in which Orel and Yuca clearly exposed Aram Andonian’s 1920 book titled Memoirs of Naim Bey as a forgery, are groundless and therefore why Akçam’s book cannot be trusted as a reliable source.”

- Political developments in the Armenian world (in Armenia and in the Armenian Diaspora)
- Culture and society in the Armenian world (in Armenia and in the Armenian Diaspora)
- Bilateral relations of Armenia with other countries
- Regional and international politics of Armenia

Since 2001, with the edition of the two latest issues, a total of 34 issues of the Review of Armenian Studies have been published.

Review of Armenian Studies, Issue 33

The 33rd issue of the Review of Armenian Studies contains 6 articles and 2 book reviews.

Penned by Ömer Engin Lütem, Facts and Comments analyzes Turkish-Armenian relations and some countries stances regarding the genocide allegations in the first half of 2016. Developments such as the German Federal Assembly’s adoption of a resolution recognizing the 1915 events as genocide, Pope Francis’ visit to Armenia, and the French National Assembly’s adoption of the bill penalizing war crimes, crimes against humanity, and the crime of genocide are explained and evaluated in this article.
The German Empire’s stance on the Armenian relocation and resettlement during World War I has been an attention-grabbing matter for a very long time. The article titled German Policies on Armenians During World War I by Barış Özdal analyses this subject.

Nika Chitadze, in his article titled Economic Factors of the Nagorno-Karabakh Conflict, touches upon an aspect of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict that is not discussed much; the economic aspect.

The article by Yıldız Deveci Bozkuş titled Karabakh Problem in the Light of Global and Regional Developments touches upon the history of the Karabakh issue, and evaluates how current developments, especially the crisis created by the shooting down of the Russian warplane, has affected the Turkish-Armenian relations and the Karabakh conflict.

In the article titled Enemies to the Death or Friends for Life? Looking into Prejudice Against Turks amongst Armenians in Armenia, Armand Sağ analyzes the dominant perception in Armenia regarding Turks and Turkey.

M. Törehan Serdar, in his article titled After the Relocation, addresses the mostly unknown side of the Armenian relocation process, which was the return of the relocated Armenians.

In his book titled Turks and Armenians: Nationalism and Conflict in the Ottoman Empire published in 2015, Justin McCarthy explains the historical development of the Armenian issue and how to interpret this development. The English summary of this book has been included in the 33rd issue of Review of Armenian Studies.

The last work contained in this issue is the review penned by Şakire Furtun on the book titled There Was and There Was Not by Meline Toumani.

Review of Armenian Studies, Issue 34

In the article titled A Truly Global Crime? Africa and the Campaign for “Armenian Genocide” Recognition, Brendon J. Cannon analyzes the campaigns carried out by Armenian groups for the 1915 events to be recognized as genocide. In the article, Cannon determines that such campaigns are carried out with very low intensity in Asia and especially in Africa, and examines why this is so.

Armand Sağ’s article titled The Armenian Diaspora in the Netherlands: Statistics of Education, Residence, and Place of Birth analyzes the practice of the creation of the “other” and the formation of a defensive Armenian identity within the process of Armenian nation-building and also analyzes the Armenian community living in the Netherlands.

Maxime Gauin, in his work titled Meline Toumani and the Turkic-Armenian Conflict, reveals the unacademic information contained within Toumani’s There Was There Was Not book and how it reflects the culture of hate developed by Armenians living in North America.

For many years, Aram Andonian’s book titled The Memoirs of Naim Bey that was published in 1920, a book which he alleged to be formed of telegrams in which Talat Bey had ordered for the massacring of Armenians, was shown as the proof of the “Armenian genocide”. However, by publishing the book titled The Talat Pasha Telegrams: Historical Fact or Armenian Fiction? in 1983, Şinasi Orel and Süreyya Yüca demonstrated that the telegrams within Andonian’s book are fake. Afterwards, the reference made to Andonian’s book by writings and books on Armenian genocide allegations decreased greatly, and after a while, nearly disappeared altogether. In his book titled Naim Efendi’nin Hatıratı ve Talat Paşa Telgrafları ve Krikor Gergeryan Arşivi (The Memoirs of Naim Efendi and Talat Pasha Telegrams) that he published in 2016, Taner Akçam attempts to prove that the “Andonian documents” are in fact authentic. Penned by Ömer Engin Lütem, the work titled An Assessment On Aram Andonian, Naim Efendi And Talat Pasha Telegrams reveals in a detailed manner that Akçam’s assertions are based on distortions and are thus invalid.

ULUSLARARASI SUÇLAR VE TARİH / INTERNATIONAL CRIMES AND HISTORY

Uluslararası Suçlar ve Tarih / International Crimes and History (UST / ICH) is an annual peer-reviewed bilingual (Turkish and English) academic journal. First published in 2006, the ICH is dedicated to be a platform for the scholarly investigation of inter-communal, inter-ethnic, inter-religious and international conflicts and crimes in the Balkans, the Caucasus, the Eurasia Region, and the Middle East. The editor of the journal is AVİM Honorary President Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem, while the managing editor is AVİM Senior Analyst Turgut Kerem Tuncel. The ICH is indexed in the Scientific and Technological Research Council of Turkey-Turkish Academic Network and Information Center (TUBİTAK-ULAKBİM) and EBSCO Host.

Uluslararası Suçlar ve Tarih / International Crimes and History, Issue 16

The 16th issue of the Uluslararası Suçlar ve Tarih / International Crimes and History (UST / ICH) published in February 2016 is mainly dedicated to the studies that examine various aspects of the Sürgün (Exile) of the Crimean Tatars in 1944.

As is known, the pretext of the Sürgün was the alleged mass collaboration of the Crimean Tatars with the Nazi invaders. This allegation was propagated by the Soviet propaganda machine in such an effective way that even today the myth of the mass Crimean Tatar treason is widespread among the post-Soviet nations. Andrew Dale Straw, in his article titled Exposing Dishonest History: The Creation and Propagation of Stalin’s False Allegation of ‘Mass Treason’ against Crimean Tatars during World War II, examines the formation and propagation of this allegation and presents a counter-narrative.

Throughout history, there have been numerous cases of forced deportations as a collective punishment of the unwanted racial, ethnic, national or religious groups. In fact, there is a huge literature on such tragedies caused by the colonial powers in the Americas, Africa, Australia and the Middle East. However, the 1944 Crimean Tatar Deportation has not yet become a part of this literature, which could have provided the research community with better conceptual tools and a comparative perspective. Based on this perspective, J. Otto Pohl, in his article titled The Deportation of the Crimean Tatars in the Context of Settler Colonialism, analyzes the Crimean Tatar case in reference to “settler colonialism” in different parts of the world.
Until now, many of the studies about the 1944 Crimean Tatar Deportation has provided ‘macro-histories’ of the Sürgün. Although the importance of these studies cannot be overlooked and similar studies should continue, the micro-history of the Sürgün also awaits to be written. Particularly, studies employing new historiographical approaches would contribute to a deeper understanding of this episode. Moreover, given that the social memory of the Sürgün is one of the building blocks of contemporary Crimean Tatar identity, studies on the formation of the social memory of the Sürgün through the stories told in public and private spaces, as well as the subjective experiences of the Crimean Tatars as they went through the deportation and life in exile would open new ways for a deeper understanding of not only the Sürgün, but also its effect on the formation of the Crimean Tatar identity. Martin-Oleksandr Kisly’s article titled Post-Trumatic Generation: Childhood of Deported Crimean Tatars in Uzbekistan, which aims to comprehend some aspects of the experiences of the Crimean Tatars who lived their childhood in exile through the testimonies Kisly collected, is an important step in this direction.

The devastation of the Sürgün was so large that today some Crimean Tatars and scholars regard it as a genocide and some Crimean Tatar activists seek the recognition of the Sürgün as such by the global public. With regard to that, the Ukrainian parliament’s recognition of the devastation of the Crimean Tatars by the 1944 Sürgün as genocide on 12 November 2015 should be taken into notice. Onur Uraz’s article titled A Legal Analysis of the Crimean Tatar Deportation of 1944 provides a detailed legal analysis of the Sürgün that seeks to answer whether 1944 Crimean Tatar Deportation can legally be characterized as genocide or crime against humanity.

Since the last two centuries or so, Russian authorities have been resorting to every means possible in trying to erase the traces of the Crimean Tatar heritage in Crimea. One of the ways that both Tsarist Russia and the Soviet Union employed to achieve this goal had been to present the Crimean Tatars as ‘uncivilized barbarians’ who needed to be civilized by the ‘enlightened Russians’. However, this representation is at odds with historical realities. The Crimean Khanate that lasted from 1449 to 1783 was based on an established and complicated polity and social system. Moreover, after its annexation by Tsarist Russia in 1783, Crimea continued to be a cultural and intellectual center and produced a number of intelligentsia who transmitted modern Western ideas and ideals to the Ottoman Empire and the Islamic world. Natalia Krolikowska-Jedlinska, in her article titled Foreigners in front of the Crimean Khan’s Courts in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, examines three cases in which foreigners appeared in the Crimean Khanate courts, which reveals that, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, there was an established and functioning legal system in the Crimean Khanate in the standards of those times.
Finally, Yuliya Biletska provides an instructive review of the latest book of Prof. Paul Robert Magocsi, a renowned specialist in the history of Ukraine, titled This Blessed Land: Crimea and the Crimean Tatars published in 2014 by the University of Toronto Press.
PROJECTIONS FOR THE FUTURE OF TURKISH-ARMENIAN RELATIONS

Proceedings of the Meeting Organized by AVİM on 16 December 2015

December 2015
On 16 December 2015, AVİM in collaboration with Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, organized a symposium titled “Projections for the Future of the Turkish-Armenian Relations”.

Most, if not all of the meetings on this critical subject reflect only a one-sided Turkish or Armenian interpretations of the Turkish-Armenian controversy with select audiences and participants. These meetings lack challenging exchange of ideas, since they are in essence monologues of like-minded people instead of dialogues involving people of differing opinions. As a consequence, these meetings fail to contribute to mutual understanding of a common historical past and to serve reconciliation of differences.

Bearing this important deficiency in mind, AVİM invited five scholars from Armenia and six scholars from Turkey to address an audience attended by members of corps diplomatique, representatives of the civil society, and the academic community. The core aim in organizing such an event was to establish expert-level talks that would focus on the critical political realities and developments in bilateral, regional, and global scales structured upon the principle of egalitarian, open, self-reflexive, and rational dialogue.

The meeting was divided into two major panels: the first panel focused on the “Future of the Turkish-Armenian Bilateral Relations”, while the second panel dealt with the “Future of the Turkish-Armenian Relations in the Context of Regional Developments”. The presentations touched upon several critical and contemporary issues in bilateral relations, ranging from the post-protocols developments, ongoing occupation in Nagorno-Karabakh and its implications, increasing influence of Russia over Armenia, the closed borders, and ECHR's Perinçek decision with a focus on the future of Turkish-Armenian relations.

The background of the participants, their presentations and the discussions that followed, and the spontaneous views expressed by Turkish and Armenian scholars reflected the inherent value of dialogue. The meeting provided a platform to exchange diverse and contrasting views, help understand points of contention and try to find common grounds on the future of Turkish-Armenian relations. It also proved that dialectics, rather than trivial propaganda and monologue, can be a powerful tool for moving towards a better future.

By publishing the presentations delivered at the symposium titled “Projections for the Future of the Turkish-Armenian Relations”, AVİM hopes to contribute to the literature and the ongoing debates, and ultimately, to the normalization and reconciliation between the Turks and the Armenians.
MONGOLIA
ON THE EVE OF THE 11th ASIA-EUROPE MEETING (ASEM) & TURKISH-MONGOLIAN RELATIONS

Proceedings of the Meeting Organized by AVIM on 18 January 2016
Conference Book No: 19

Mongolia on the Eve of the 11th Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) & Turkish-Mongolian Relations
(Turkish and English; paperback, 53 pages)

During the conference titled 11. Asya-Avrupa Zirvesi Öncesi Moğolistan’daki Mevcut Durum, Moğolistan’ın Bölgesel Potansiyeli ve Türk-Moğol İlişkileri (Mongolia on the Eve of 11th Asia-Europe Summit, the Regional Potential of Mongolia, and Turkish-Mongolian Relations) organized on 18 January 2016 by AVİM, participants evaluated Mongolia’s strategic importance for Turkey and the region, shared their views on Turkish-Mongolian relations in light of Mongolia’s strategic position tied to Russia and China in the regional sense, and the latest developments that occurred in the region.

In the conference, in which the economic potential between Turkey and Mongolia and the increasing cooperation between the two countries was also put under the microscope, attention was drawn to the need towards intensifying activities that are being carried out in various fields in the framework of bilateral relations and the need to utilize opportunities for cooperation in order to further develop economic and trade ties.

The discussions that took place during this conference have been compiled into a conference book titled Mongolia on the Eve of the 11th Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) & Turkish-Mongolian Relations and published by AVİM in January 2016.
Uluslararası Hukukta Zarar Giderimi ve Ermeni Talepleri
The main aim of the genocide allegations against Turkey is to gain extensive compromises by way of forcing Turkey to accept the accusation of the crime of genocide. Within this framework, efforts towards this end by certain Armenian diaspora organizations and the Republic of Armenia have gained momentum in recent years. Several third-party countries, as well, put forward genocide allegations against Turkey in accordance with their political goals.

Law has been one of the fields in which genocide allegations have intensified. Reparation cases in US courts, legal cases against Doğu Perinçek in Switzerland and the subsequent Perinçek v. Switzerland case in the European Court of Human Rights that seriously disrupted Armenian efforts, and the legal case filed by the Armenian Catholicosate of Cilicia are some of the initiatives seen in the field of law.

This study titled Uluslararası Hukukta Zarar Giderimi ve Ermeni Talepleri (Compensation for Damages in International Law and the Armenian Demands), which was prepared by Ertan Kiraz at the Strategic Research Institute of the Turkish War Colleges Command, analyzes legal activities against Turkey by Armenian groups and their claimed legal grounds. It also evaluates the Armenian demands in terms of international law.

AVİM believes that this study, which is published as a report will serve to understand the aims of the genocide allegations against Turkey, which could gain political support, and whether or not the legal dimension of these allegations is consistent.
AVİM Trainee Program

AVİM carries out trainee programs throughout the year. For its Trainee Programs, AVİM accepts application from undergraduate and graduate students and recent graduates who are highly proficient in at least one foreign language, and who wish to carry out comprehensive studies on the recent political developments in Europe, the Balkans, Wider Black Sea Region, the Caucasus, and Central Asia that have strategic importance for Turkey. AVİM offers two separate trainee programs, one short term and one long-term.

AVİM Trainee Program participants are expected to help in the organization of AVİM activities and events, and to contribute to the work that goes into the preparation of AVİM’s publications. Additionally, the program participants are requested to follow the developments in the Eurasia region throughout their term.

AVİM Trainee Program participants are required to prepare a report at the end of their program. This report should be based on the detailed research that AVİM Trainee Program participants should carry out throughout the course of their program about a topic of interest. In this way, AVİM Trainee Program participants are expected to gain the opportunity to carry out detailed research in a professional environment, benefiting also from the knowledge and expertise of AVİM analysts. In 2016, seven participants from Bilkent University, Erciyes University, Hacettepe University, Middle Eastern Technical University, Osmangazi University, TOBB University of Economics and Technology, and Uludağ University were incorporated to AVİM’s Trainee Program.

Regarding information on AVİM Trainee Program, candidates may contact Özge Nur Öğütcü via staj@avim.org.tr or o.ogutcu@avim.org.tr.

I participated in the AVİM Trainee Program last summer in order to fulfill my undergraduate program’s mandatory summer internship. In the education program, I learned many things that will be of benefit to my academic life due to the personalized education provided by the Trainee Program and also the guidance given by AVİM’s attentive analysts. Firstly, I had the opportunity to learn the political dimensions of Turkish-Armenian relations, but also to learn a different dimension of these relations by conducting research into and writing an article on the religion factor in these relations. Aside from these, participating in conferences organized by AVİM in which academics and researchers specialized in different historical and political issues has allowed me to gain a different perspective on topics of importance in terms of Turkey’s history and politics. In brief, last summer I gained the opportunity to conduct research on topics of interest to me, and was also introduced to different perspectives with the information provided to me by AVİM’s analysts. In other words, my two-month summer internship was highly beneficial for me. I thank AVİM for all of this. I recommend the AVİM Trainee Program to anybody who is especially interested in pursuing an academic career.

Cemre Yapıcı

Undergraduate Student at Bilkent University

I participated in the AVİM Trainee Program in the May-August 2016 period. One of the main reasons for me choosing AVİM was that it focused its activities on the Eurasian region. Up until today, almost all of the subjects I learned or studied was focused only on Europe, and thus Asia was left aside. I felt that this situation was a deficiency. AVİM helped me in my efforts to fill this deficiency. Throughout the time that I was a part of the AVİM, I had the opportunity to work on the geopolitical importance of Central Asia and I developed myself on this subject. My experience at AVİM was also very important in terms of it being my first work experience. Thanks to AVİM's helpful and experienced analysts, I was easily able to adapt to the working environment in AVİM, and I tried to absorb as much experience as possible while I was at this institution. Through the research I conducted and the commentary pieces I wrote, I personally gained experience on how an institution such as AVİM functions. I cannot thank the valuable members of AVİM enough for this experience that will guide me when I am going to decide on my career in the future. I recommend AVİM’s Trainee Program to anyone who wishes to experience how such an institution functions.

Turkey-Armenia
Relations in the Year 2016
Turkey-Armenia Relations in the Year 2016

Turkey-Armenia relations constitute a significant portion of AVİM’s studies. In 2016, the relations between the two countries were affected by the fact that commemorations and other activities in Armenia and other countries last year to commemorate the centenary of the Armenian Relocation turned into anti-Turkish and anti-Turkey events. While Armenian officials tried to vilify Turkey in every opportunity, Turkey virtually took relations with Armenia off the agenda due to intense internal and external developments. As a matter of fact, Turkey-Armenia relations were not directly included in the program of the 65th Government that was formed in May, and were only mentioned in the context of the Karabakh conflict with the statement, “In accordance with the peaceful settlement of conflicts in the Caucasus, our country will continue to strive for the cessation of the occupation in Azerbaijani territories, Upper Karabakh in particular, and the ending of tensions between Azerbaijan and Armenia.” In parallel to this, Turkey’s efforts to assist the settlement of the Karabakh conflict have increased.

Following the failure of the protocols signed between the two countries in 2009, anti-Turkey sentiments in Armenia has increased, whereas demands from Turkey to recognize the “Armenian genocide” and deal with its outcomes (reparations and property return) has begun to be brought forward. According to the Diaspora, territorial demands are also among the demands from Turkey. However, no such intention is observed, for now, from the Armenian government.

As is known, a State Commission was charged to prepare the legal justifications for the demands from Turkey. Although three years have since passed, these justifications remain unannounced, and the demands from Turkey are yet to be made. The foremost reasons for this is that the Armenian government probably deems it inappropriate to make these demands, which will inevitably cause serious tensions between Turkey-Armenia, in this period of clashes in Karabakh and civil war in Syria and Iraq, and the unlikelihood of the support by the US, Russia, and even the EU for these demands. Furthermore, there are certain disagreements between Armenia and Russia behind the scenes. Among these are Russia’s arms sales to Azerbaijan, Russia’s apparent support for the return of some of the Azerbaijani regions occupied by Armenia to Azerbaijan, Russia’s leaning towards the idea of Turkey contributing to the settlement of the Karabakh conflict, criticisms by the Muslim members of Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO), especially Kazakhstan, against Armenia for the Karabakh conflict, and Armenia’s failure to gain the expected benefits from membership to the Eurasian Economic Union (EEU). Moreover, among the reasons for Armenia’s recent position could also be the fact that “Armenian genocide” thesis was weakened following European Court of Human Right’s (ECtHR) verdict on the Perinçek v. Switzerland case, and the fact that the argument that the “Armenian genocide” is similar to the Jewish Holocaust is no longer compelling. Factors such as the recent armed clashes in Armenia between the police and certain groups, the subsequent resignation of the government, difficulties during the formation of the new government, and the upcoming elections in 2017 also prevents the assertion of the above-mentioned demands against Turkey that have no priority and are not realistic. However, it is also not correct to think that Armenia is in the process of renouncing these demands.

When Armenia’s problems with Turkey and Azerbaijan are analyzed, it is seen that Armenia is responsible for the emergence and intensification of these problems. Matters such as the recognition of the genocide allegations, reparations, return of properties, and cession of territories to Armenia were settled once and for all with the Treaties of Moscow, Kars and Lausanne after the First World War. However, Armenia is still strives to reopen closed files, a totally unrealistic effort. There is no question, according to international law, that Karabakh is an autonomous region within Azerbaijan. As a matter of fact, no country has recognized Karabakh as an independent state. Yet, Armenia is also trying to reopen the closed Karabakh file. However, Armenia’s occupation of Karabakh and other territories of Azerbaijan weakens Armenia’s position.

There is no question that Armenia’s problems with Turkey and Azerbaijan affect Armenia in an adverse manner. Despite aids from the Diaspora as well as from some countries and international organizations, Armenia is still a country that cannot ensure the prosperity of its people and that loses population due to migration. In order to put an end to these adversities, Armenia, first and foremost, must solve its problems with its neighbors and cooperate with countries in its region that are gaining prominence in terms of transportation and energy resources. However, it is seen that both Armenia and the Diaspora, which continue to be under the influence of historical events and ambitions rather than focusing on the realities of today, have no plans to change their attitudes and perspectives, and are determined to carry on with policies that benefit no one, including themselves.
AVİM’s Renewed Website

AVİM is currently the only think-tank that exclusively takes Eurasia as its focal point and employs analysts specializing in different geographies and countries constituting Eurasia. Within this framework, AVİM continues its studies on Turkey-Armenia relations and the “Armenian question”, which are among the main issues of the Turkish foreign policy, and publishes two peer-reviewed academic journals, one being in Turkish and the other in English, that focus solely on these topics. As such, there is no institution equivalent to AVİM. Additionally, AVİM’s third peer-reviewed academic journal features research on disputes, conflicts and crimes concerning different communities, ethnic and religious groups, and nations. Books based on academic research, conference books and reports are also among AVİM’s publications. AVİM publishes original commentaries and analyses by its own analysts, various announcements, and significant commentaries/analyses previously published in different channels on its own website and blog, as well. AVİM’s daily bulletin reaches more than 7000 subscribers both in Turkey and abroad.

AVİM’s unique place within the research community makes AVİM’s activities and publications a center of attention of different segments of the society, policy makers, students, foreign specialists and other interested people.

Upon this observation, in 2016, AVİM renewed the content and design of its website to make it easier for its followers to access information in a more user-friendly environment.
In April 2016, AVİM and TOBB University of Economics and Technology signed a joint training protocol.

This protocol, which envisions to give priority to TOBB University of Economics and Technology studies in admittance to AVİM Trainee Program, aims TOBB University of Economics and Technology students to work with specialists whose expertise lie within the field of international relations with special focus on Eurasia and gain experience in the field prior to their graduation.
In May 2016, AVİM and Bilkent International Relations and European Union Politics Society (BIEST) renewed the protocol on cooperation previously signed in December 2015.

With the renewal of this protocol which foresees joint activities between AVİM and BIEST and to give BIEST members priority in admittance to AVİM Trainee Program, a major step has been taken towards the development of a long-term cooperation between AVİM and Bilkent University students.
Divergent Turkish and Armenian interpretations, memories and assessments with regard to the 1915 events is one of the reasons for the politicization of the controversy, leading debates on the issue to lack scientific/academic character. In these debates that take place in a much politicized environment, the very important legal aspect of the issue is not sufficiently addressed.

Existing legal studies mostly focus on criminal law, and revolve around individual penal responsibility. However, today, legal debates on the 1915 events go beyond the criminal law aspect and focus on ‘state responsibility’ and the human rights. Furthermore, the Armenian side seeks to bring the issue to the legal sphere with demands such as reparations.

Based on this observation, AVİM set out to organize a series of workshops on the theme of 1915 Events and International Law. The first being held on 8-9 October 2015 in collaboration with Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University, the workshop series continued in 2016 with subsequent workshops organized in cooperation with BaŞkent University (Ankara), Dokuz Eylül University (İzmir) and Özyeğin University (İstanbul).

In the total of four workshops organized until the end of 2016, the topics discussed were the Legal Aspects of the 1915 Events, Perinçek Precedent and Its Effects, Property Law, and Successor State-Continuing State, respectively.

In 2017, AVİM plans to continue the 1915 Events and International Law workshops initiated in 2015.
In today’s environment where the geopolitical center of gravity is shifting from the Euro-Atlantic to the Asia, AVİM, seeking to contribute to the understanding of challenges and opportunities that Turkey faces within the changing global geopolitical context, attributes particular attention to two key components of Eurasia in its studies – the Balkans and the Caucasus. Within this framework, AVİM continues its studies on the Turkish-Armenian relations, which is an issue of particular concern for Turkey in the Wider Black Sea region.

In 2016, as part of its focus on the Turkish-Armenian relations, AVİM organized a series of conferences under the title of Armenian Question 2016: 10 Views with the participation of Turkish and foreign academics who focus on the “Armenian question”, and Turkish diplomats who took part in the implementation of Turkey’s foreign policy on this issue.

The conference series titled Armenian Question 2016: 10 Views, which featured, respectively, Ambassador (R) Dr. M. Şükrü Elekdağ, Prof. Dr. Seçil Karal Akgün, Ambassador (R) Kadri Ecvet Tezcan, Prof. Dr. Kemal Çiçek, Prof. Dr. Hikmet Özdemir, Ambassador (R) Dr. Osman Faruk Loğoğlu, Jeremy Salt, Prof. Dr. Mustafa Budak, Assist. Prof. Christopher Gunn, Prof. Dr. Haluk Selvi as speakers, will also continue in 2017. The speeches delivered at these conferences will be compiled into a conference book under the same title.

AVİM 2016 Annual Report

A Look Into 2017
The year 2017 carries the potential to be a time span where the shift and changes in the global balance will accelerate and become more visible. The absolute authority of the West, leading and shaping the global developments and stamping its own identity and values for the past four centuries has been diminishing as a new power structure is appearing in the horizon in the East.

A new administration will be governing the USA. The two power houses of the European Union, France and Germany will hold elections that will usher in a new lease in government. These events will have a bearing on and will also be affected by the global change. The banner slogan of the new administration of the USA, “America first” will no doubt conjure up for the rest of the globe their first. Hence, it should not come as a surprise if such attitudes would sow the seeds for new priorities and power struggle globally. Should the election statements and promises for the USA to retract from the Trans Pacific Partnership Agreement actually carried out, it is bound to facilitate Asia to round up around Russia and China in a more cumulative manner.

The rising xenophobia and islamophobia in the West is apt to encourage the support for isolation in the USA and to strengthen the already prevalent concept of “fortress Europe” in the European Union. Isolation and introvert policies for the European Union, which desperately needs outreach to resources to be able to maintain the way of life it has achieved, will not provide the remedy for its problems; to the contrary, possibly will exacerbate them, melting down the rich accumulation of centuries.

Is the future then so bleak? Not necessarily. AVİM is of the view that Turkey can provide the litmus test to identify the difficulties and worries in the relations between the West and the East. Turkey is a staunch ally of the West. Turkey is a formidable member of the military pillar of the West, the NATO alliance. On the other hand, Turkey has been persistently given a cold shoulder from the political and economic pillars of the alliance from Turkey’s point of view, the European Union. It will be increasingly difficult to sustain this double standard approach.

Turkey also needs to strengthen its relations with the East. Multifaceted close ties with the Central Asian Republics provide a solid ground for Turkey’s opening up to the East. However, it still remains to be seen how welcome Turkey’s approach and opening to the East is received by two powers of Asia, the Russian Federation and People’s Republic of China.
AVİM is conscious of the political hurdles Turkey faces due to its sphere of work and research. A well-known case is the support accorded to biased, hateful Armenian narrative and allegations. The motives and instincts behind that support also is a revelation for what not to do. AVİM is resolved to continue with its constructive and consistent work and research on this subject. Our periodical journals will continue to contribute to scholarly research and insights. We also have started working on a fourth journal to appear in 2017 on the overall subject of Eurasia and we count on the contribution of Ambassador (R) Yiğit Alpogan who has recently joined the AVİM staff.

In conclusion, if we are to yearn for an optimistic future, in 2017 and after, it is elementary to keep in mind that the enlargement of the global economic cake requires regional and global stability and peace, and that there are new shareholders and new proportions in its distribution.
