Cyprus issue stalled by Greek Cypriots refusal to recognize Turkish Cypriots equality, Recep Tayyip Erdogan says

Türkiye believes the most realistic solution to the Cyprus issue lies in the coexistence of the two states on the island, President Recep Tayyip Erdogan said on Thursday.

"The main reason the Cyprus issue remains unresolved is the Greek Cypriot sides refusal to recognize Turkish Cypriots equal international status," Erdogan said at a joint news conference with Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus' President Tufan Erhurman, who is paying his first visit to Türkiye after being elected.
